

January 24, 2017

To whom it may concern,

I have worked with EGG Electric and Ellen Aschendorf for approximately twenty-two years. In my capacity as Operations Manager at Siemens Building Technologies, Johnson Controls Inc. and Automated Logic of New York and New Jersey I engaged EGG Electric as a subcontractor performing the electrical installation of our Building Automation Systems on an excess of thirty projects. Among the many owners and contractors with whom we worked are Cornell University Medical Center, MetLife, Credit Suisse, NY Presbyterian Hospital, JP Morgan Chase, Turner Construction Corp. and Tishman Construction Corp. We are currently working together at NY Hospital Langone Medical Center.

My three employers as well as the clients for whom we have worked place strong emphasis on safety and have stringent quality requirements. In all cases, EGG Electric was not only recognized as a top performer but demonstrated qualities not found in most of their competitors.

In the area of project safety EGG Electric not only complied with all site requirements but demonstrated a commitment to safe working practices and active support of site wide safety. I do not recall any instances in which EGG Electric personnel were cited with a safety violation or criticized for not cooperating with site safety personnel.

The installation and operation of Building Management Systems is subject to stringent inspection and commissioning prior to acceptance by the owner. During this inspection process the quality of the installation and wiring is carefully scrutinized by licensed professional engineers and commissioning agents. At no time in the past do I recall Egg Electric's work found to be in violation of code, of substandard workmanship or in any manner defective.

I have worked in the New York construction industry for forty years and been involved with several hundred projects. I can reliably attest that the safety practices, quality of work, ethics and professionalism of EGG Electric have established them as one of the top performers in this industry.

William J. Anderson
Operations Manager – New York City